The Hindi Cinema industry commonly termed as Bollywood in 1970s was a combination of mainstream movies featuring ‘superstars’ and the growing popularity of the ‘angry young man’. But in the race to represent the woes and frustrations of Indian Populace, Popular cinema inherit tendency to use escapism. The protagonists were shown to reach from complexity to limelight, correct all the wrongs by the virtue of ‘heroism’. This resulted in a ‘reel’ depiction of real public, which was based on aspirations rather than reality. This gap was bridged in the 1970s, with the portrayal of the ‘common man’. In the era of 1970s where most of the actors were seen portraying larger than life characters, Amol Palekar choses to portray character of a common man. Amol Palekar not only portrayed character of a common man with conviction but also lived the character with utter simplicity which creates a special place in the hearts of the audience.

Amol Palekar, an ingenious actor and a social worker has an unconventional style of acting which made him rule the Indian Cinema during the 70s era. He is a known director and a famous painter. ‘Amol’ means precious and indeed Amol Palekar is one of the precious personalities. Palekar is considered one of those few actors in Hindi Cinema who splendidly perform character of common man on silver screen. His ‘heroism’ and persona was always simple and unconventional. In most of his films, he displayed the common man who has drawbacks, limitations, dreams and that’s the main reason why audience could connect with him because they can see their own reflection on screen through Palekar’s characters. Quality of simplicity not only bring Palekar closer to his audience but also make him stand apart among his contemporaries especially in those times when angry young man Amitabh Bachchan, romantic Rajesh Khanna and talented Sanjeev Kumar, and many others were already ruling the silver screen. Palekar movie’s plot used to be different from his contemporaries works because of its uniqueness and simplicity. His presence always had the charm of freshness, simplicity and reality, and his movies are still loved among the audience. His movies are known for its good storyline, acting and direction. Amol comes from a lower middle class background, where his father worked in GPO and mother in a private company. They could not even afford a radio for young Amol, hence he used to listen songs in neighborhood. As child he used to help in household works along with his sisters, he used to sweep the floor, make beds and also assist in the kitchen. He considers that this helped him throughout his life. He also did odd jobs to pay his fee, learnt type-writing and also taught others. Amol didn’t initially plan to pursue acting, his first love still is Painting. He pursued graduation in Fine Arts from Sir J J School of Arts, Mumbai and has many exhibitions to his credit. He even worked eight years in Bank of India as a clerk. During same time he joined theatre and started enjoying it. He even performed for Satyadev Dubey Marathi Plays. After observing his spectacular performances in several plays, Director Basu Chaterjee approached Palekar for film, but initially he was hesitant in stepping towards the cinema but Basu Chaterjee doesn’t lose hope and again approached Palekar for another movie and this time he agreed finally.

He began his filmy career with Marathi movies Bajiraocha Beta and Shantata! Court Chalu Aahe and then appeared in Hindi Cinema. Palekar as an actor worked in several other regional languages such as Telugu, Kannada, Bengali, and Malayalam. He started his Bollywood career with Rajnigandha. He played the role of Sanjay a talkative, careless and happy go lucky person. The plot of the movie is simple but what catches audience attention is the presence of simplicity in Palekar’s character. Being the main lead of the film Palekar is never shown in fancy clothes or stylish hairstyle. He appears like one among us, sleek oiled hair parted at one side of the head, thin moustache, plain casual shirts, following mundane routine of 9-5 job, discussion with colleagues about office partiality and politics and struggle to meet girlfriend on time. Palekar is never shown coming out through car or even two-wheeler, rather like a typical upstart middle class person who travels from local transport, Palekar’s character is depicted generally travelling from local bus or auto and dreams of getting promoted to officer grade so that he can get married and settled, he often seems discussing real struggles of life, office scenario and chances of his promotion with his girlfriend as she’s the only companion he has apart from his few office colleagues. Palekar’s character was never larger than life but they were definitely larger part of common man’s life. His character in Chhoti Si Baat is of an accountant, a simple and shy boy who likes a girl working in another office and dreams of admiring her, interacting with her and having lovely time with her, but in reality he is not able to utter a single word in front of her, similarly in those era people who were more decent and simple found it really difficult to approach a girl whether they travel in the same bus, work in nearby offices or observe each other through their terraces or windows. Palekar’s character went under transformation in the movie or rather through personality development to gain her lady love confidence. It wouldn’t be wrong to comment that Palekar merely reflect common man, rather he imitated common man’s life on silver screen. In his another movie Baton Baton Mein, he played the character of Christian boy Tony who is a cartoonist and travel from Mumbai Local to his office where he notices his lady love and it is very interesting to observe how he convey his thoughts in chits through co-passengers and how he interacted with the girl’s uncle about each other. Mumbaikar’s can feel the essence of Mumbai Local and can also understand what importance it holds in common man’s life. Palekar movies are not just about winning lady’s love but also the situations which a common man goes through. In the movie Palekar character Tony is a cartoonist working on provision and earns 300 for now but has vision and ambition of getting settled well in future. In the movie Rang Birangi, Amol plays a character of a successful businessman Ajay Sharma who has done very well for himself and his family but always appears busy in his work and doesn’t pay much attention at home. In between his friend makes a cute mischievous plan to bring back colors in his dull and gloomy life. It’s interesting to observe how Amol Palekar’s character innocently get trapped in the whole plan and performed according to his friend. But his friend proves to be a blessing in disguise and Ajay’s life is again filled with colors. It is noteworthy how Palekar’s character proves it’s good to be ordinary because that’s the extraordinariness of life. Palekar’s Chitchor has a simple sweet romance plot where once again Palekar proves that even simple innocent smile and honesty is enough to begin a new relationship. Another stellar performance of Palekar is seen in Naram Garam where he plays the character of lower middle class where one of his dialogues is a worth- mention “Main aadmi Kahan hoon main toh gareeb hoon!” (I am not a man I am just poor…) The sentence appears very simple but the conviction through which Palekar has delivered this sentence reflects real emotions of struggling poor. Palekar is successful in depicting the pain, hardship and the struggle of survival for existence in such a subtle way that it is difficult to differentiate between ‘reel’ and ‘real’. Apart from all these stellar performances and many others, Palekar is still considered best for his performance in Golmaal a masterpiece movie with outstanding performances, which is still considered one of the finest comedy movies of Hindi Cinema. In the movie Palekar plays the role of Ramprasad a graduate who spoke several false truths to his boss to give an ideal impression of person and save his job where he earns 950 in those times. The movie is mainly remembered for Palekar subtle portrayal of a common man wearing short kurta with jacket, hanging jhola, parted oiled hair with a thin moustache, his way of addressing Sirrr, hindi one-

Amol Palekar made ordinariness of life extraordinary or rather special on silver screen, in one of his interviews he states, “Shouting from the rooftop is not my nature at all. One of my contemporaries was talking about my acting, he said acting kahan karta hai (he doesn’t act) I feel that was the best compliment. Palekar continues and states, “The very concept of Amol Palekar becoming popular came through because he was not larger than life, because he was someone who would rather travel by bus or local train.”

Palekar characters were closer to reality, simple, sweet, intense, down to-earth, closer to life, did not indulge in violent revenge but had the capability to emerge as a hero despite his apparent flaws. Palekar’s biggest achievement was his great accessibility to the common man, he expressed their day-to-day woes and heartbreaks without going over the top, his conviction was realistic and the common man adored him for that.
